Flavoury sourness provides a unique taste to desserts.

Passion Fruit is notoriously difficult to deliver overseas when ripe. Therefore, you won't find it in every store. The Passion Fruit Pulp is eaten with a spoon or could be made into juice, which becomes even tastier if you mix it with orange juice. The pulp is used as a filling for baking, an addition to cocktails, ice cream, yoghurts and various desserts.

Passion fruit has a high concentration of vitamin A and vitamin B3, and regarded by many as a natural way of lowering cholesterol. Passion fruit contains 7 times more vitamin C, 13 times more iron and 5 times more fibre than an apple. Plus vitamin K and antioxidants.
